EDITOR'S LETTER

he Walking Dead left us hanging at the end of November, as Rick (Andrew Lincoln) and his group were being overrun by zombies.

Now, as senior writer Rob Moynihan details in this week's issue, things are about to get even more brutal.

The second half of Season 6 begins with a bloody battle and, later this spring, the introduction of the notorious comic book nasty Negan.

But while things may seem dark on camera, behind the scenes The Walking Dead is anything but grim. "Andy Lincoln gave me a big bear hug as he was covered head to toe in sticky fake blood," Rob says of his most recent trip to the Georgia set. "When we broke for lunch around 2am, everyone sang "Happy Birthday" to Ross Marquand [Aaron]. It's just a very warm and positive and fun atmosphere that you wouldn't expect on a gruesome and gory show that deals with death all the time."

In other words, the Walking Dead cast and crew save the rough stuff for the screen. Which is good for us, because we need Rob back in one piece—and writing more about the show. (Check out our site, TVInsider.com, for additional intel from Rob's set visit, plus more photos of Lincoln and Norman Reedus.)

Read on: For this issue, we're happy to boast we're Dead inside.

Hawkeye Pride Let's just say it didn't poll well: The Good Wife's portrayal of Iowa in its caucusthemed January 10 episode had some of our readers reeling. "I've said for years The Good Wife is the best-written show on TV," lowa resident Mary Holmes wrote, "but I was disgusted with this episode. Imagine my surprise in learning that lowans' favorite food is a loose meat sandwich. And that one woman decided to change her vote because Peter Florrick spit one out. Does the campaigning get ridiculous? Yes, but that is nationwide, not just in Iowa. For the most part, our residents are concerned, informed and involved. For shame, Good Wife." Brenda Arends also pointed out that one scene featured corn growing in a field. "In Iowa in February?" she asked. "Writers and producers from big cities should do some fact-checking. It might prevent them from looking totally clueless sometimes."

Why it's time to binge Mozart in the Jungle...Stats on Super Bowl commercials...

We round up the highlights from winter press tour

BY MARISA ROFFMAN AND MICHAEL SCHNEIDER

ow many people are watching Netflix and Amazon Prime? NBC execs think they know.

The two streaming services refuse to share viewership data (to the consternation of broadcast and cable execs). But in one of the most discussed moments at January's Television Critics Association press tour, Alan Wurtzel, NBC Universal's research president, revealed some numbers, courtesy of Symphony Advanced Media, which used audio recognition to track, via participants' cell phones, the shows they're watching. In the 18-49 demographic, Marvel's Jessica Jones averaged 4.8 million viewers in its first 35 days on Netflix, while Narcos attracted 3.2 million; Amazon's Man in the High Castle brought in 2.1 million viewers.

Netflix Chief Content Officer Ted Sarandos was not impressed with the findings. "Maybe it's more fun than talking about NBC ratings," he said. "I don't know why anyone would be spending so much energy and time. And given what I believe is really remarkably inaccurate data, I hope no one's paying for it." It's that kind of give-and-take that kept reporters on their toes as the broadcast. cable and streaming networks promoted new and returning series. Here are the highlights from the two-week gathering.

WILL IT BE CASE CLOSED FOR BONES AND CASTLE?

Fans may soon have to say goodbye to two popular crime-solving duos. Both Bones and Castle have yet to be renewed for another season. According to Fox Television Group Chairman Dana Walden. the decision to launch Season 12 of Bones depends on the actors' and showrunners' willingness to return. (Stars David Boreanaz and Emily Deschanel are suing the series' production company and network over alleged profit shortchanging.) "We love the show," said Jonathan Collier, an executive producer on the drama. "David and Emily are very excited too. If Fox can make it work, we'd love to [return]."

Castle's Stana Katic and Nathan Fillion are only contracted through the current eighth season, but ABC Entertainment Group President Paul Lee said the drama could be back without one-or even both—of its leads. If only one of the actors re-signs, it'll be "the hardest episodes of Castle to write," executive producer Terence Paul Winter said of explaining the departure. "[But] we'll buckle down and figure out an honest way to tell that story. We'd love everyone to come back."

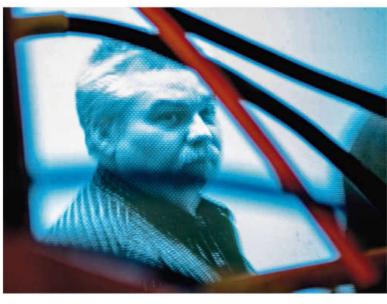

MAKING A MURDERER'S INFLUENCE GROWS

Speaking of Bones, the executive producers are just as enthralled by Netflix's Making a Murderer as fans. Collier has a theory as to why the docuseries became an overnight sensation: "There's something so pleasing [about] a puzzle. There's a murder; let's try to figure it out." Even before Murderer's premiere, the Bones writers started prepping a documentarystyle episode of their show (which Collier describes as The First 48 meets Parks and Recreation) to showcase a side of the investigation process the audience normally doesn't get to see and capitalize on viewers' infatuation with true crime.

"We love taking a look behind the curtain," executive producer Michael Peterson says. In the episode, Booth and Brennan are eager to participate in a documentary about their investigation to clear up misconceptions about their work. "Booth is very much [game] to do it, because he's like, 'We want to know the truth behind these interrogations," Peterson said. "And Brennan's the exact same way; there's so much misleading science out there."

SAYING GOODBYE TO LOUIE

Louis C.K. isn't yet sure if he's finished with his FX comedy series Louie or if he'll continue to visit the character for decades to come. "He hasn't promised me further seasons," reported FX Networks CEO John Landgraf. "I have no commitment from him." Landgraf said he frequently asks C.K. about whether he'll do another season but "also had a conversation that maybe this is a show you'll do periodically for the rest of your life. It could be one of those odd TV shows that has 15 seasons over 40 years."

C.K. is open to the concept of sporadic episodes. "I don't want people to get sick of me," he said. "Now that there is essentially no show, if I have an idea that's burning and feels right, then it will start from the idea. I don't know when that will happen. It may not. It was such a great job, I'm likely to try it again at some point."

> KEEP THE NEW SERIES COMING!

While FX's Landgraf predicts a rollback of TV production in the coming years, citing 2015's 412 original scripted series as too many, Netflix's Sarandos is planning the opposite. "If there is too much TV, someone else is going to have to slow down," he said. He intends to spend $6 billion this year in content, for both original and acquired programming. As Netflix expands to 190 countries, it plans to offer more than 600 hours of original fare. (Netflix currently boasts 75 million subscribers, including nearly 45 million in the United States.) Upcoming new series include the comedy Love, from producer Judd Apatow and starring Community's Gillian Jacobs; the Ashton Kutcher-led sitcom The Ranch: and the Full House spinoff Fuller House.

REBOOTS AND REMAKES GALORE

With the return of The X-Files underway, Fox is combing through its library, ordering a new edition of Prison Break, again starring Wentworth Miller and Dominic Purcell as the once on-the-lam brothers, and green-lighting the pilot 24: Legacy, featuring an all-new cast but sticking with the drama's real-time format. "It doesn't feel like it is fully replicating the original, how much Jack Bauer [Kiefer Sutherland] carried by himself," Fox's Walden said. "This is a new organization, a new CTU, a completely different story in terms of the special-ops group we're focusing on. It's a contemporary-feeling story, about the potential to activate sleeper cells in the U.S. and radicalize Americans."

Despite the spotty track record of revivals, networks still can't resist familiar titles, which come presold to audiences. Even after the disappointing ratings of Heroes Reborn, NBC Entertainment Chairman Bob Greenblatt said he's open to the idea of returning to the world for future installments, while a proposed Law & Order revisit is on hold. Netflix has partnered with Norman Lear to remake his 1970s and '80s hit One Day at Time with a Latina cast, led by Rita Moreno. And Fuller House executive producer Bob Boyett says he's constantly asked about reviving other shows in his 1980s and '90s canon. such as Perfect Strangers. "It has been mentioned and people have expressed some interest," Boyett says of the Bronson Pinchot/Mark Linn-Baker sitcom.

ALSO NOTEWORTHY...

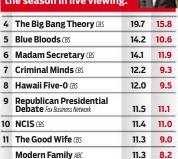

CBS's Person of Interest is set for a spring premiere but still does not have an official airdate. Executive producer J.J. Abrams said this season is probably the last, but the network is mum. • The cast of Friends is reuniting—sort of. Jennifer Aniston, Courteney Cox, Lisa Kudrow, Matt LeBlanc and David Schwimmer will be on hand (with Matthew Perry in a taped segment) for NBC's Must See TV: A Tribute to James Burrows, airing February 21. The special, honoring the famed sitcom director, will also feature cast members from Cheers, Frasier, Will & Grace and Taxi, plus a reunion between Two and a Half Men's Jon Cryer and Charlie Sheen. • Showtime renewed Shameless for Season 7 and announced that Homeland will relocate to New York next season. • NBC's Greenblatt addressed Jimmy Fallon's recent string of accidents. "He doesn't have a drinking problem that any of us know about. He goes out and has fun," Greenblatt said of the Tonight Show host, "He's had some accidents. Aside from that, he's in better shape than he's ever been." • Fox renewed Scream Queens and Empire. • Netflix picked up a second season of Marvel's Jessica Jones. FX ordered a comedy pilot starring Tracy Morgan, written and produced by Kev & Peele's Jordan Peele.

Erin Models Her New Shape

Erin Willett is ready to show some skin! On the February 8 makeover episode of NBC's The Biggest Loser, the contestant rocks a Topshop pantsuit. "I felt like this was the first time in my life that I was truly starting to love the reflection staring back at me, and it was because of my hard work that it was all coming together," says the singer, who's lost 50 pounds since starting the season at 238 (right). Style guru Tim Gunn (left) also loves the look. "The jumpsuit provides a clean, uninterrupted silhouette that echoes her great shape," he explains. Mozart in the Jungle

f your first thought was "Mozart What?" when Amazon's Mozart in the Jungle unexpectedly won two major Golden Globe awards (best comedy series and lead comedy actor for Gael García Bernal), you surely weren't alone.

For two years, Amazon has sneaked this sexy, sophisticated romp about a New York symphony orchestra into its streaming lineup during the holidays—in 2015, the night before New Year's Eve-rendering it a well-kept secret. Thanks to the Globes, it's now deservedly on more people's radar.

What viewers will discover, as Mozart plays variations on an inspired theme of artistic temperament and passion, is a show that's intoxicating in its originality and seductive charm. That's especially true any time its central character, the mercurial celebrity conductor Rodrigo (an impishly adorable García Bernal), takes the podium in performance or in life.

"We are notes in this beautiful concert of existence," he gushes to board chairwoman Gloria (the ageless Bernadette Peters), and his enthusiasm is infectious. Season 1 introduced him to the orchestra through the eyes of 26-year-old aspiring oboist Hailey (Lola Kirke, refreshingly unaffected), who in Season 2 learns to assert herself and becomes comfortable hanging out amid dazzling classical A-listers—including violinist Joshua Bell and pianist Lang Lang, shown facing off over Ping-Pong.

Mozart hits its stride midway through Season 2, when Rodrigo takes his orchestra family on a sensual odyssey to his Mexican homeland. Even with a labor strike looming, there's a euphoric harmony of adventure, romance and, of course, music. The afterglow will carry you happily through the rest of the 10-episode season. - Matt Roush

Live TV: The Good, Bad and Ugly

Why broadcasting without a net is worth it BY MICHAEL SCHNEIDER

ive TV is harder than it looks. Just ask Steve Harvey. The host's Miss Universe pageant gaffe on December 20 on Fox-in which he announced the wrong winner-made him the punch line of jokes.

"A mistake I made probably cost this woman more pain than she deserved." Harvey now says. "It was human error." According to Harvey, he attended all of the rehearsals prior to the show, and at no time was he told that he'd announce the first runner-up before the winner. On stage that night, when he saw Miss Colombia's name on the Teleprompter, he assumed she should be awarded the crown. In fact, Miss Philippines is the new Miss Universe.

"The only thing that ticked me off is that the [pageant] people didn't tell me how to fix it," he says. "I walked back out there and I just owned it."

Harvey's mistake became a worldwide phenomenon. That kind of impact, for better or worse, is exactly why broadcast networks have returned to live programming in such a big way.

Live broadcasts have been a hallmark of television going back to the dawn of the medium-when there was no videotape. Now, as viewership has splintered because of so many choices, networks are adding more events to their schedules in an effort to force immediate tunein and make some Harvey-size noise.

The advent of social media has advanced the cause, as people see posts about shows and then start watching. Mark Bracco, executive vice president of Dick Clark Productions (which produces a plethora of live events, including the Golden Globes, American Music Awards and Miss America), says airing live helps in this age of delayed viewing: "[You want] events that are vital enough for people to say, 'I gotta be there at 8 o'clock to watch. I can't even start five minutes later, because I might miss something great."

Some of broadcast's biggest shows, including football, competition series like The Voice and American Idol (which air live for parts of their runs), Dancing With the Stars, the Academy Awards and the Grammys, benefit from airing in real time.

NBC in particular has embraced the trend, starting with 2013's The Sound of Music Live! The network has since produced Peter Pan Live! and The Wiz Live!, and Hairspray Live! will air in December. (NBC's sitcom Undateable also airs live each week.) Fox is producing its first musical, Grease: Live, on January 31. And both networks are staging real-time religious musical events: Fox's The Passion, narrated by Tyler Perry, comes in March, and NBC has a December Nativity special from producers Mark Burnett and Roma Downey.

CBS just reversed its long-standing practice to air the Grammys on a tape delay on the West Coast. For the first time, on February 15, the show will be live across the country. "We're a nation that wants to see things live, especially event programming," says CBS Senior Executive Vice President Kelly Kahl. "This is one of the biggest events there is."

Of course, real-time programming presents challenges. The networks must adhere to FCC content standards—which can be tough when talent doesn't cooperate. The most infamous example is the lisecond. The FCC fined CBS a record $550,000. (The fee was eventually thrown out by an appeals court.)

Nonetheless, the incident led to a clampdown on broadcasting indecency. A five-second delay remains standard for most telecasts, which is usually long enough to catch inappropriate language but not to precisely edit out the profanity.

Viewers of January's Golden Globes missed several jokes from host Ricky Gervais and presenters like Jonah Hill because the actors uttered a few expletives, forcing standards employees to drop large sections of audio. "It is someone's split-second call to drop audio, and I absolutely applaud the professionalism and dedication of a group of people who are complete experts at it," says Paul Telegdy, NBC's president of alternative and late-night programming. "They err on the side of caution. We used every tool to stop people at home from hearing things that the FCC would not like them to hear. Do I wish that people used less colorful language so that the experience at home was less confusing? Yes. But we are going to police it while we are FCC-regulated in these matters."

Telegdy also cautions that not every show or event needs to be live, as highly edited, pretaped episodes are still much easier to produce. "Live is more expensive," he says, "so you need to [factor that into the decision and ask], 'Is there a reason to do it live?"

"We're a nation that wants to see things live, especially event programming" –Kelly Kahl, CBS senior executive vice president

Grahn: To hell with that marriage curse! My favorite show is Madam Secretary, where Téa Leoni and Tim Daly play a fabulously romantic couple who often have conflicts but always rise above them. Let's give the audience some hope.

Will the ceremony be a major blowout or a low-key quickie?

Grahn: It'll be big, so I've been on a diet. This ain't easy! I'm slightly long in the tooth and I hate that I have to be in a wedding gown. It's wrong. It's unseemly. I tried on one that was straight out of What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?

DeVry: It's been a while since GH gave the audience an extravagant wedding, but it would probably be more appropriate if Alexis and Julian did it simply, quietly, maturely. After all, this is not Alexis's first time at the rodeo.

Grahn: I can't even remember some of my GH weddings. One happened in the hospital hallway. What's the best part about working with Grahn: Will's abs. Yes, I know I just objectified you, but I don't care.

DeVry: The coolest thing about Nancy is that she keeps me laughing. You can't underestimate the importance of that.

Grahn: Will always watches out for me in our sex scenes. Not only does he strategically cover up my fat, but he has this sexy way of caressing my cheeks and pulling them slightly up, giving me an instant facelift. He's the guy! I've been in soaps 30 years. Trust me, none of my past leading men ever did that for me.

DeVry: I've got a lot of things to think about when I'm in a love scene with Nancy. [Laughs] It's complicated.

Grahn: I love that Will loves me. Mind you, he doesn't like me. We fight like crazy. But he loves me and it shows on screen. The women who watch our show really appreciate that. I'm so happy to have him as my ball and chain.

The People v. O.J. Simpson

A riveting retelling of an unforgettable true American Crime Story

Premieres Tuesday, Feb. 2, 10/9c, FX

ensational in every way imaginable, The People v. O.J. Simpson is guaranteed to spellbind viewers the way the original media spectacle did in the mid-1990s. "Something big's happening here," realizes Johnnie Cochran (an electrifying Courtney B. Vance) while watching the infamous Bronco chase on TV, as an entire nation did in real time. This inaugural season of a new American Crime Story franchise is big, all right.

The TV event of the winter, it's instantly riveting, artfully crafted, sharply acted and wildly entertaining. Also timely, with its framework of post-Rodney King racial turmoil and suspicion of police authority, playing to an audience newly weaned on sprawling true-crime narratives like The Jinx and Making a Murderer. They'll find it impossible to resist the lurid but lucid compulsion of this outrageous-because-it's-true "limited series," developed by Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski (Ed Wood, The People vs. Larry Flynt), with multiple episodes directed by Ryan Murphy in a state of feverish intensity.

Hindsight adds another layer of fascination to this all-star replay of gripping legal theater, which played out on our TV screens daily. "This is a much better daytime soap than anything we've got," declares a network exec who scraps his lineup for wall-to-wall coverage of the O.J. murder trial. We couldn't get enough then, and TV history is about to repeat itself.

The staggeringly impressive dream-team cast includes Cuba Gooding Jr. (see page 32) as the petulant defendant, John Travolta as a weirdly reptilian and supercilious Robert Shapiro, David Schwimmer as dutiful, dapper O.J. loyalist Robert Kardashian (whose lecture on fame to his starstruck kids verges on camp), Nathan Lane as jaded courtroom legend F. Lee Bailey and Sterling K. Brown as an introspective Christopher Darden.

But it's the chief combatants who steal the show: a flamboyant Vance as the impassioned, cocky Cochran and fierce Sarah Paulson as embattled prosecutor Marcia Clark, whose humorless zeal renders her unsympathetic to unforgiving TV cameras and a mocking tabloid press that rattles her confidence.

Though the verdict polarized the country, most will agree on the merits of The People v. O.J. Simpson as terrific TV. ★★★★

The X-Files

Mondays, 8/7c, Fox

t only took three tries—out of six in the new reboot, but whatever—for The X-Files to rediscover its mojo, but it's worth it to hear Agent Scully (the ravishing Gillian Anderson) proclaim in the instant-classic February 1 episode, "I forgot how much fun these cases could be." Truth.

New rule for the franchise: the lighter the better. After a sluggish start in the opener, which dived too deeply into the murky swamp of alien-human conspiracy—"I have seen this before," sighed Scully to a robotically obsessed Mulder (David Duchovny), and I had to agree—things picked up the next night with a spooky-icky horror fable about genetic manipulation. Now, at the midpoint: "Mulder & Scully Meet the Were-Monster," by Emmy winner Darin Morgan at his whimsical peak.

Mulder rouses from an existential funk to join Scully on a creature-of-the-week hunt in the Oregon woods, equipped with a new camera-phone app he can't operate nearly as efficiently as those trusty old flashlights. They encounter the least likely of reluctant shape-shifters (Flight of the Conchords' Rhys Darby), whose take on humanity is both bleak and hilarious. Best news: Mulder once again wants to believe. As do I, and when it comes to The X-Files, I probably always will.

amned if that Lucifer isn't one charming devil. The ultimate charismatic bad boy, he's playing hooky from Hades, cavorting among hedonistic humans in Hollywood. As played with dashing panache by Tom Ellis, Lucifer Morningstar has definite star quality, and a knack for seducing people to speak out loud their forbidden desires and uncomfortable truths with just one look—unless you get on his bad side and he decides to scare the bejesus out of you with a flash of his fiery red orbs.

But here's the uncomfortable truth about Lucifer the series: It's just too damnably familiar, clipping the fallen angel's wings by trapping the poor demon in an ill-chosen purgatory of formulaic procedural crime-drama with a resemblance to Sleepy Hollow that probably is no coincidence.

Fab British accent? Check. Partnered with a feisty, beautiful detective (likable Lauren German) who resists his allure but comes to enjoy his company and rely on his special gifts? You bet. Despite its derivative nature, Lucifer is initially good fun as the thrill-seeking antihero mocks and manipulates mortals, including a lusty shrink (Rachael Harris). But fickle Lucifer is easily bored. And as the show goes on, so am I. **

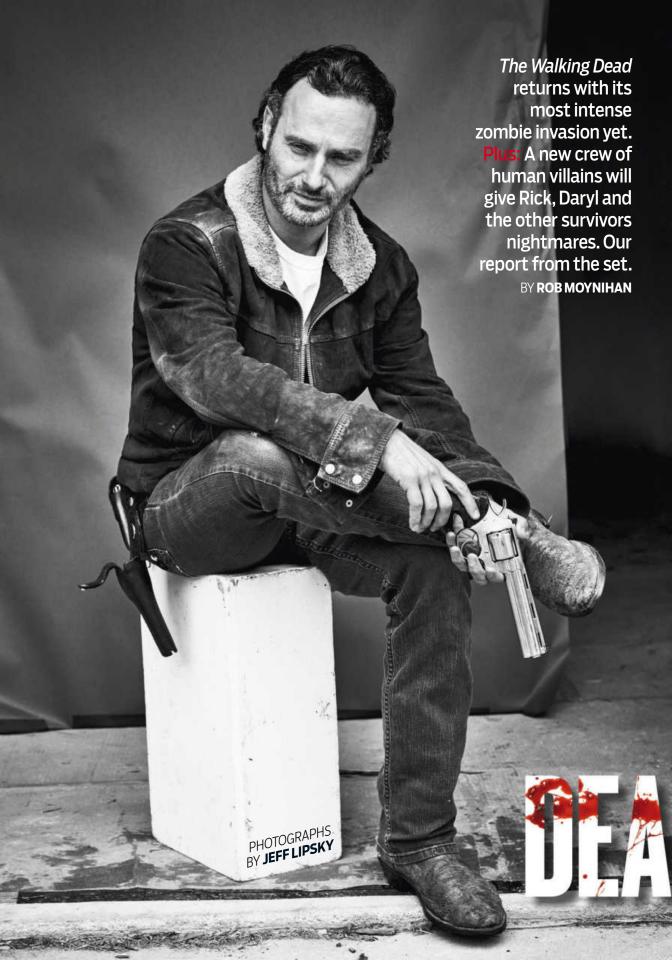

The Magicians

Mondays, 9/8c, Syfy

"BE WARNED. THIS adventure is no mere children's tale," reads a narrator as a legendary kid-lit fantasy world comes to mysterious and potentially perilous life in Syfy's intoxicating, provocatively surreal adaptation of Lev Grossman's Magicians trilogy of novels. The main setting is Brakebills University—think Hogwarts as a decadent party college—attracting stoners and misfits like neurotic savant Quentin Coldwater (appealing nerd/hunk Jason Ralph). He's lured to this secret academy in part because of his fascination with the supposedly fictional universe of Fillory, which begins to reveal its secrets to him for reasons not instantly clear. "There's no such thing as safe magic," advises classmate Alice (Olivia Taylor Dudley) as Quentin and his funky new inner circle invite danger, knowing not what they conjure. It promises to be a wild ride. ***

That's what The Walking Dead star Andrew Lincoln has dubbed this night in late August on the Senoia, Georgia, set of AMC's zombie blockbuster. It's 1:30 in the morning, and Lincolnalong with the majority of the series' main players and about 180 "walker" extras-is pacing in the middle of a bright red blood-soaked street with a battle-ax in hand. Feral screams and grunts pierce the night's warm, heavy air as Lincoln psychs himself up for hours of hand-to-hand combat between the residents of the Alexandria Safe-Zone and the walker horde that has breached the walls and infested the residential community.

"As if you didn't have enough to do tonight, do you want two more kills?" stunt coordinator Monty L. Simons asks Lincoln, who eagerly obliges. Soon, even more fake blood is being applied to Michonne's (Danai Gurira) samurai sword, and the army of warriors pushes deeper into the zombie-infested streets, hacking and slicing at every walker that gets in its way like a carefully choreographed ballet resulting in a symphony of guts and gore.

"This is the biggest episode we've ever done in terms of the amount that happens," Lincoln says during a break in the action. "This is the greatest jeopardy they've all faced, and it's going to take a lot to save this community."

The second half of The Walking Dead's sixth season marks the beginning of a new chapter for the series. The idyllic Virginia community that was a brief beacon of safety and hope has been compromised by hundreds of flesh-eaters and is now without its leader, Deanna Monroe (Tovah Feldshuh), who was bitten and fell victim to the herd during November's midseason finale. Now it's up to constable Rick Grimes (Lincoln) to lead the entire population of Alexandria on the counterattack.

"This is a huge turning point for Rick and the group, because there's a lot of chaos and it's very brutal," says executive producer and creator Robert Kirkman. "This is not the end of Alexandria, but we'll see a different Rick Grimes as he faces possibly the biggest hardships ever."

There will also be an expansion of the show's universe. "We are going to see a larger world and discover all sorts of complications and complexities to the world that the group was not aware of and not even thinking about," says showrunner Scott M. Gimple, who also promises a more straightforward and linear viewing experience—as opposed to telling the story through various timelines, as he did in the first half of the season.

Viewers got their first glimpse of that world beyond Alexandria last fall through the eyes of tracker Daryl Dixon (Norman Reedus). As Daryl was escorting the zombie herd away from Alexandria on his motorcycle, he was ambushed and captured by a trio of assailants who were fleeing from a community of their own. After establishing a sense of trust, Daryl helped them escape from their mysterious pursuers. But Daryl's faith in the others proved to be misplaced-he was double-crossed and stripped of his beloved crossbow and bike. "At the end of filming that day, I was really pissed!" Reedus admits. "That's my motorcycle. Nobody rides my motorcycle! For Daryl, he feels like he just let Rick down, and he's also pretty pissed at this point."

While Daryl's storyline was fairly limited in the first eight episodes of Season 6, Gimple promises the audience will get to see much more of the fan favorite this winter. "We put Norman through his paces," Gimple says. "He's very scary in this back half, but there are a couple of moments where he made me laugh out loud. There is a whole lot of Daryl and a wide variety of Daryl." Upon his return to Alexandria, he will also reunite with Rick for a "little adventure" of their own, says Reedus. "We have a little Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kidtype thing going on," Reedus says with a laugh. "It's safe to say that we get to do the tango, much to everyone's excitement," Lincoln adds.

Daryl's path home to Alexandria hit a hurdle during a coda in November's midseason finale when Daryl,

"THIS IS THE GREATEST JEOPARDY THEY'VE ALL FACED, AND IT'S GOING TO TAKE A LOT TO SAVE THIS COMMUNITY"

-ANDREW LINCOLN

Abraham (Michael Cudlitz) and Sasha (Sonequa Martin-Green) were stopped by a group of armed men who demanded all of their possessions. After being asked who they worked for, one of the men uttered the name most avid readers of the comic book source material have been waiting for years to hear: Negan.

Indeed, the biggest bad in the Walking Dead universe is heading to the screen this season, but Gimple has a warning for overzealous fans to temper their expectations. "His name has been invoked and his group is certainly of growing importance, but it's not like we are going to see him starring in an episode right off the bat," Gimple says. In fact, Negan's first on-screen appearance-which Kirkman promises will be "bonechilling"—won't be until the April 3 season finale.

Portrayed by The Good Wife's Jeffrey Dean Morgan (see page 46), Negan will eclipse past antagonists like the Governor (David Morrissey) or Terminus-dwelling cannibal Gareth (Andrew J. West) because of his charismatic nature and intense brutality. In the comics, Negan is the leader of a group based outside Washington, D.C., known as the Saviors, who plunder supplies and resources from other communities in return for protection against walkers. He also wields a baseball bat wrapped in barbed wire, lovingly named Lucille. "He is the darkest incarnation of a bully," Gimple says. "He's a very magnetic character; he isn't just a sociopath. He is the star of his own movie."

Another familiar face from the comics being introduced is Gregory (Nikita's Xander Berkeley), the cowardly leader of a neighboring colony known as Hilltop. "We're changing it in some ways so readers will experience a slightly different Gregory than we have in the comic," Kirkman says.

If there's one member of the group who has a fighting chance against this new foe, a case could be made for Carol Peletier (Melissa McBride). Over the past six seasons, Carol has transformed from a meek and abused housewife to a cold and calculated killer, doing whatever it takes—including murdering a young girl—in order to ensure her group's survival. "Her evolution has been a surprise every step of the way," McBride admits. "She's adapting well, and I'm most proud of her coming to the forefront to utilize her capabilities and no longer shush her own self."

When Carol first arrived in Alexandria, she attempted to blend in as a casserole-loving, cookie-baking homemaker while keeping a close eye on every resident. She reverted to her ass-kicking self following the brutal invasion by the Wolves, and she went toe-to-toe with Morgan (Lennie James) after discovering he was harboring a Wolf prisoner (Benedict Samuel) within the community's walls. "This is not the last time they will have a confrontation over their opposing points of view about survival," McBride teases. "We're not predisposed to taking another life, so she'll be struggling."

"THIS IS NOT THE END OF ALEXANDRIA, BUT WE'LL SEE A DIFFERENT RICK GRIMES AS HE FACES THE BIGGEST HARDSHIPS EVER"

-EXECUTIVE PRODUCER ROBERT KIRKMAN

The struggle was also a little too real for fans in the first half of Season 6 when it appeared one of The Walking Dead's most beloved characters, Glenn (Steven Yeun), died at the hands of ravenous zombies. After four agonizing weeks without any further information, it was finally revealed that Glenn had been shielded by the corpse of Alexandrian Nicholas (Michael Traynor) before the former pizza delivery boy was able to shimmy under a Dumpster to wait out the herd.

The secrecy surrounding Glenn's fate was so intense that other cast members were enlisted to help reinforce the charade. "Steven went into hiding and I had to sneak him around," Reedus says with a laugh. "He was in the back of my car lying on the floor with a coat over him. Those were some interesting couple of weeks, for sure."

Now that viewers know Glenn is definitely alive, they will not have to wait very long for his reunion with his pregnant wife, Maggie (Lauren Cohan). "Everything that they've lived through is bringing a new optimism to their way of life that is going to be very valuable moving forward," Kirkman says. "It just strengthens both characters and their relationship."

Even though Glenn's arc had a happy ending, death is always lurking on this show, and not everyone will make it out of the first episode alive. "It is such a great group of people that it does not get any easier," McBride says. "When the news comes, we just celebrate that person and meander down the moments that were fun, funny and wonderful. We wish them well going forward, knowing that they'll be well."

Back on the set, the clock has just struck 5am as the production team races against the inevitable sunrise to prepare for the climax of this action sequence. It's been an exhausting 12-hour shoot for the entire cast and crew, but when a costume assistant attempts to mend a hole in Reedus's pants, the actor drops them entirely and reveals his tie-dyed boxers, bringing a much-needed moment of levity to the early morning. The battle of Alexandria may be ending, but the war for humanity has only just begun.

How to Get Away With Murder is back with more killer twists

BY SHAWNA MALCOM

IT'S LATE AFTERNOON on the Hollywood set of How to Get Away With Murder, and Annalise Keating (Viola Davis) isn't quite herself. For one thing, she's talking to her dead husband.

For another, the mercurial attorney is clad in a voluminous silk top and cardigan rather than a trademark power suit, and she's sporting long braids, which have been gathered into a loose knot. "Hungry?" asks Sam Keating (Tom Verica), who looks to be very much alive as he tenderly greets his wife in their kitchen, where he's prepared her a hearty breakfast.

But Annalise—showing no trace of the desperate woman who, in November's feverish midseason finale, begged her law-school students to shoot her as part of an elaborate plan to cover up a murder-has more pressing matters than food on her mind, including an upcoming trip to Ohio for a case. "It's just a simple [flashback] scene that shows Sam and Annalise were happy once," Davis explains between takes.

As if anything's ever simple when it comes to Murder. The ABC thriller, which was created by Pete Nowalk and is executive produced by Shonda Rhimes, is a full-throttle thrill ride with secrets, lies and an ever-growing number of whodunits around every twist-filled corner. Even star Davis, who recently became the first African-American to win a lead-actress Emmy, admits she has trouble keeping her drama's dense plotlines straight: "It keeps getting more cray cray!"

It's also getting psychologically richer. The aforementioned flashback scene between Sam and Annalise, which takes place 10 years ago and revolves around a huge development that shaped Annalise's past, will become a major focus for the show when it returns February 11. "It's going to be emotional," Nowalk promises. "These last six episodes are extremely character-driven. But obviously we're still going to have our twists and turns, because we have a huge mystery to unravel."

Namely, what on earth is the dysfunctional deal with Annalise and Wes (Alfred Enoch)? The Middleton University professor and her favorite pupil have a complicated relationship, to put it mildly: Since enrolling in Criminal Law 101, Wes has bludgeoned Annalise's husband; she's lied to him about his girlfriend Rebecca's (Katie Findlay) fate; and he shot to kill Annalise after she confessed that Rebecca was really dead. But the connection between Annalise and Wes goes back much further, as fans discovered in the finale's closing shocker, which showed Annalise and sometime-girlfriend Eve (Famke Janssen) looking on through interrogation-room glass as a 12-year-old Wes, then called Christophe, was questioned by police about his mother's apparent suicide. "Good God, Annalise," Eve asked, "what did we do?"

Fans have tossed around plenty of their own theories

online: Annalise, or Eve, actually murdered Wes's mom. Or little Christophe did the deed himself, and Annalise helped cover it up. For now, all Nowalk will allow is, "People have very smart theories. Those have all crossed my mind as well."

Still, the showrunner—who says he'd originally planned to tackle the Annalise-Wes backstory in a later season and only decided to move up the timeline while writing the fall finale—vows that the mystery will be resolved, at least for viewers, by the time Season 2 concludes March 17. "The question is: Will Wes know who exactly they are to each other?" Nowalk teases. "And will Annalise finally tell him?"

One detail's for certain: In the midseason premiere which picks up two weeks after the shooting, on the day Annalise is released from the hospital—Murder's antiheroine doesn't feel like telling Wes much of anything. "She's mad at him," reports Davis, who adds that Annalise's near-death experience has reopened long-ago wounds. "She feels like, 'Enough with you! You're a burden to me."

For his part, Wes is pretty "f---ed-up in the head," Enoch says bluntly. "He's dealing with the fact that he shot someone who's close to him, for better or worse. That's a difficult work scenario for him to return to. don't you think?"

"These last episodes are extremely character-driven. But obviously we are still going to have our twists and turns there is a huge mystery to unravel"

—Executive Producer Pete Nowalk

And yet Annalise and her criminally inclined Co. do have a job to finish: They need to get away with framing former client Catherine Hapstall (Amy Okuda), who's about to go on trial for the murder of ADA Emily Sinclair (Sarah Burns) and the shooting of Annalise. But will a guilt-riddled Asher (Matt McGorry), the ADA's true killer, stick to the plan? Teases Nowalk, "You're going to be surprised by who takes Asher under their wing."

Meanwhile, his ex-girlfriend, Bonnie (Liza Weil), gets the flashback treatment to her law-school days, and Laurel (Karla Souza), the only other "Keating Five" student in the room when Annalise took a bullet, grows much closer to Wes. Teases Souza, "We share the most personal things with each other that we haven't shared with anyone else in the group."

Fans can also expect to learn who killed the filthy-rich Hapstall parents, as well as the reason Annalise's fixer, Frank (Charlie Weber), agreed to kill pregnant sorority girl Lila for baby daddy Sam way back in Season 1. And, if Nowalk gets his wish, Annalise's mother, Ophelia (Cicely Tyson), will also return for at least one episode.

It's all leading up to a season finale that is "very different and offbeat," Nowalk says, "which makes me excited and terrified at the same time." Sounds like a plan for the perfect Murder.

HOW TO GET AWAY WITH MURDER, Midseason premiere Thursday, Feb. 11, 10/9c, ABC

Fresh Off the Boat's resolution for the Chinese New Year: Stay funny BY INGELA RATLEDGE

his season on Fresh Off the Boat—ABC's sitcom about an Asian-American family living in 1990s Orlando—we've already seen the Huang clan do Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas. But that was just the warm-up for the biggest celebration of all. "We always wanted to do a Chinese New Year episode," says executive producer Nahnatchka Khan of the installment, airing February 2. "It means so much to so many people, and it's never really been on American TV before!"

In honor of the occasion, East will meet West—literally—at Cattleman's Ranch, the steakhouse owned by patriarch

Louis (Randall Park). The set was transformed with vibrant decorations, including scores of red paper lanterns ("We used 88, a very auspicious number," jokes production designer Liz Kay), and a traditional Chinese dance troupe was brought in to perform a routine with an oversize lion puppet. Still, the true pièce de résistance, at least for the cast and crew, was the elaborate dinner banquet, which featured real food. "The dumplings were really delicious," raves Hudson Yang, who plays eldest brother Eddie. "I probably had, like, 20 of them!"

FRESH OFF THE BOAT, Tuesdays, 8:30/7:30c, ABC

In between takes, Ian Chen-who plays Evan, the youngest Huang siblinghopped inside the dancers' lion puppet, which has lifelike eyelids that can blink and required two professionals to operate. "The kids got to play with everything. They were so excited," says Kay. "They're used to the Cattleman's Ranch set by now, so it was cool to watch them running around with their eyes lighting up."

During a little downtime, Forrest Wheeler (middle son Emery) engaged in some present-day Year-ofthe-Monkey business with "A" Camera 1st Assistant Ray Dier. "The scope of this episode is big for us. There were more rehearsals and production elements than usual," Khan says. The extra effort was worth it, she adds: "We're really proud that we get to expose people to this holiday beyond what they've seen on the place mat at a Chinese restaurant."

"We love that bear! We've dressed him up a lot!" Kay says of decking out the restaurant's 8-foot-tall unofficial mascot. (Among his previous getups? A cowboy hat and a pirate costume.) "He has a life of his own. We've tossed around potential names for him. I think the last one was Gertrude, so maybe he's a she!"

Yang (left, with Park, Lucille Soong, Wheeler, Chen and Constance Wu) says the episode sparked conversations about the cast's own customs. "There were some differences in our celebrations—but mostly, our experiences were similar," he says. "It's special that we're doing this, because Chinese New Year is a big deal for Asian people."

READY TO

scene a spin as a beleaguered label exec in

HBO's gritty, glitzy Vinyl BY INGELA RATLEDGE

SOMETIMES, BECOMING AN overnight sensation can take ages. Just ask Bobby Cannavale. Over the past couple of decades, the 45-year-old actor has been quietly racking up a list of TV and movie credits as diverse as it is long. (Know anyone else who's hit the delightfully peculiar trifecta of Ally McBeal, The Station Agent and Snakes on a Plane?) Along the way, he's earned plenty of accolades—including Emmys for his turns on Will & Grace and Boardwalk Empire—and industry cred, all while managing to be the kind of celebrity who could still pump his own gas without inciting a paparazzi feeding frenzy. (And that's despite the fact that he's in a long-term relationship—and expecting a child—with Bridesmaids and Spy scene-stealer Rose Byrne.)

But now, as he steps into the lead role on Vinyl, HBO's highly anticipated new series from executive producers Martin Scorsese, Terence Winter and Rolling Stones frontman Mick Jagger, Cannavale's stint under the radar could be over at long last. He plays Richie Finestra, a volatile, drug-addicted record label owner in New York City during the early 1970s who's on the brink of

Cannavale (at right with Wilde and below with Scorsese) "is the perfect actor to play a character with so many colors because he has a little bit of everything," says Vinyl executive producer Terence Winter

Here, Cannavale shares what it's like to enter the world of sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll—and finally be first on the call sheet.

When we meet Richie in the pilot, directed by Scorsese, he's snorting cocaine in his car. Both his record company and his marriage to wife Devon (Olivia Wilde) are in jeopardy. What went wrong? He lost his passion. He'd been clean and sober for a few years and he moved to Connecticut to live this domesticated life. But he took his eye off the prize, and complacency set in. We'll see him fall off the wagon and have a real crisis of conscience.

Only one way to go from there, right? I think he's a guy who wrecks himself—literally and metaphorically—in an attempt to rebuild. Richie's journey will be the struggle to find his passion again without killing himself in the process. That's a pretty good jumping-off point!

How will the people in Richie's orbit react to his sudden change of tune? He's very much in love with his wife, but it's a tremendous obstacle to their relationship that he's not sober anymore. And his business partners, especially Ray Romano's character [Zak Yankovich], are like the witches in Macbeth, trying to claw at him and bring him down. The stakes get higher and higher throughout the season.

Have you injected much of your own personality into the role as you play Richie? Any part I do, I gotta bring some of myself into—I just work that way. I was on set filming this for six months, 15 hours a day, and I'm in almost every scene, so I had to keep the lines of communication open and give my input. If I wasn't sure about why something happens here, or there's a beat there, I'd ask Terence or the writers. By nature, having a role this big makes you feel good—and you need to be given the right amount of tools to go in and pull it off.

You've shared the screen before with your 20-year-old son, Jake Cannavale [in Nurse Jackie], and with your girlfriend, Rose Byrne [in Adult Beginners, Annie and Spy]. Are there any plans at this point to bring them on the show?

Not this season, but I'm sure anything could happen. Jake did work on the pilot as a PA when he was home from his freshman year of college. Working with Marty is not a small job—he was doing 80 hours a week!

"He's a guy who wrecks himself literally and metaphorically—in an attempt to rebuild. Richie's journey will be the struggle to find his passion without killing himself." —Cannavale

Manhattan is depicted as a dirty and dangerous hellscape. Do you remember when it was like that? I grew up across the river in Hoboken, and some of my most vivid memories are of visiting the city in the late '70s when I was a kid. It was a noman's land—like a war zone. To my eye, with Marty Scorsese in charge of the whole thing, it looks absolutely accurate.

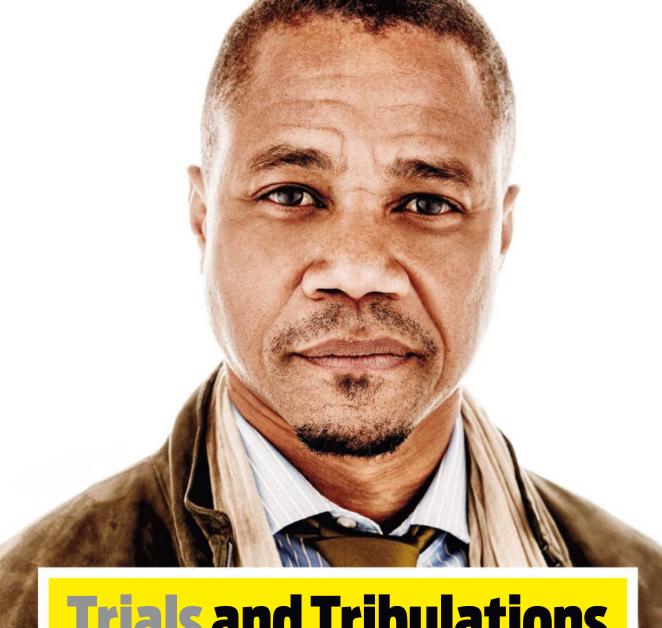

This project has been in development for years. What was it like having so much lead time? I was still working on Boardwalk when I was asked to read the script. I've never been attached to something so far in advance before shooting, but it's been a godsend. I learned how to play the guitar from Lenny Kravitz. I sat down with former label heads. I've had talks with Mick Jagger—he invited me to see the Stones and go backstage. I must have listened to nothing but music from that era for the last three years. Do you know what it's like to go through the entire catalog of Yes and Jethro Tull? Not fun. But I learned a lot.

Does hanging out with Mick Jagger ever get old? I'd forget about it when I was in the moment. It would've been a waste of time if I was sitting there gaga, asking questions. It was only after that I'd think, "I cannot believe what just happened." One night I was in a cab with my lady on the way home and I pinched myself, like, "Did we just go to Mick Jagger's private birthday dinner?" [Laughs]

And Scorsese? Marty's amazing. We rehearsed for months before we started shooting, and he never said, "I want to do this so you can get comfortable with me." But that's exactly what it did. He put me in his pocket, so I could truly go to him with anything.

Are you feeling the pressure of carrying such a high-profile production? It feels great. Twenty years ago, I would've gotten overwhelmed by this weight on my shoulders. But I've been acting for a long time, and I've been in every trench. I've gone from doing plays for no money in little theaters to being audition leader to being an understudy to saying two lines to get my SAG card, then becoming a guest star, then getting recurring roles. I'm well-prepared, I've worked really hard, and it's all led to this.

Trials and Tribulations

Cuba Gooding Jr. opens up about taking on the toughest role of his career in The People v. O.J. Simpson and why his parts keep veering toward the football field BY AUBRY D'ARMINIO arning: Ask Cuba Gooding Jr. about making a comeback in FX's The People v. O.J. Simpson: American Crime Story, and he will start singing LL Cool J's "Mama Said Knock You Out." ("'Don't call it a comeback! I've been here for years!" Remember that song?" he asks.) Whether Gooding likes it or not, comeback is a word he will be hearing a lot in the weeks ahead, thanks to his turn as fallen football icon Simpson. He plays opposite John Travolta (as defense lawyer Robert Shapiro) and Sarah Paulson (as L.A. prosecutor Marcia Clark) in the 10-episode drama, produced by Ryan Murphy (American Horror Story). Since word is truly that good, the 48-year-old actor may be returning to the heights of his Academy Award-winning performance as brash wide receiver Rod Tidwell in 1996's Jerry Maguire. In the meantime, however, he's politely ceased rapping in order to answer a few questions.

Which of your early TV roles are you most asked about? None of them! It's funny, I started my career on television with Hill Street Blues and MacGyver in the 1980s, yet people keep asking me about going from film to TV.

You played the titular surgeon in the TV movie Gifted Hands: The Ben Carson Story. What did you think when you learned he was running for president? I'd hung out with him and always remembered how confident he was. He had the arrogance of someone who excels at what they do-but at a whole other level.

Would you play him again? Yeah! [Laughs] In truth, it depends. I would have never said, "We should make the O.J. Simpson story starring me." I just told my agents to pair me with real filmmakers. So when they said, "Ryan Murphy wants to talk to you," I replied, "I'll do whatever he wants." And if Ryan said tomorrow, "We're doing the Ben Carson story next," I'd be like, "Oh, I got all the research down."

Before O.J., what kind of TV roles were you offered? Anything you could think of. CSI. Ugly Betty. I was just offered a stint on a new ballroom-dancing show. [Laughs]

Do you remember where you were in 1994 when you heard that O.J. Simpson had been accused of killing his ex-wife, Nicole, and her friend Ronald Goldman? No, but I recall watching the basketball playoffs when the image of the Bronco chase flashed on the screen. And someone said O.J. was in there with a gun to his head. I remember the horror I felt, thinking I was going to see a celebrity blowing his brains out on TV.

Did conjuring those feelings help you play him? Truthfully, this is the hardest role I've ever had, psychologically. To be an actor, you have to layer on someone else's emotions. I had to walk around as O.J. for six months. I found myself getting upset very easily. It took me a month to recognize my own feelings again and reconnect with reality.

What was the hardest moment for you to film? The funeral scene when O.J. kisses Nicole's corpse. And there were many times on-and off-camera when I was just bombarded with all this horrific evidence about the crime. You can't easily let that stuff go.

What was working with John Travolta like? He might be my favorite costar of all time. There were days filming in the courtroom when we all thought we'd go insane, so John and I would break into song and dance. Actors like him have so many great stories. He talked about the time Michael Jackson wrote a song for him and he said, "Great!" Then three months later, when he said, "I'm ready to record it," Michael said, "I'm sorry, I kept it for myself." The song was "Wanna Be Startin' Somethin'"! I was like, "What?" Why do you think you've had luck playing football players? I played varsity in high school and thought that was the career I wanted. Then I said to my girlfriend, "I'm not going to play pro football, but I could be a pro football player in a movie." I swear my career grew out of that statement. I also think I understand how they hold themselves, that supreme confidence. Sometimes I do believe that a lot of their violent behavior-like O.J. in Nicole's 911 calls—could be a result of concussions on the field. So, in all seriousness, would you call this your comeback? I had this agent, Coralie Jr., who discovered me in high school. She told me to get head shots and lie on my résumé because nobody checks it. She told me to have fun at a wrap party but never be the last one to leave. And she told me, "You will have ups and downs in your career, so learn to live in the between time." And I did. I've written screenplays. I was on Broadway [in The Trip to Bountiful]. The way I see it, I was never away. I was here, evolving and growing.

If you win an Emmy, will you dance on stage like at the 1997 Oscars? [Laughs] I actually just sprained my ankle. Every once in a while, I do get stupid enough and try to do a flip. Sometimes I land and sometimes I don't. Like life. So, yeah!

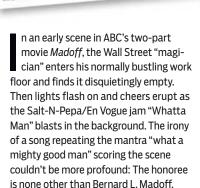

THE PEOPLE V. O.J. SIMPSON: AMERICAN CRIME STORY, premieres Tuesday, Feb. 2, 10/9c, FX

MADOFF INTHE U.$.A.

Richard Dreyfuss and Blythe Danner take on felonious financier Bernie Madoff and his deceived wife, Ruth, in ABC's bold new miniseries

BY ILEANE RUDOLPH

"I'd never have to sell myself again. The title would do it for me," says the main character and unreliable narrator (Richard Dreyfuss), who perpetrated history's largest Ponzi scheme and manipulated family, friends and celebs—including Steven Spielberg and Kevin Bacon—into handing him sums of money adding up to somewhere around $20 billion. (The $50-plus billion figure bandied about was the total of what victims thought they had.)

Madoff is inspired by the book The Madoff Chronicles: Inside the Secret World of Bernie and Ruth, a well-respected account by ABC's chief investigative correspondent Brian Ross. "It's a great character and family piece, but also with a thriller drive running through it," says executive producer Joe Pichirallo (Hollywoodland). That drive is fueled by reallife whistle-blower Harry Markopolos (Frank Whaley), an accounting sleuth who tried to expose Bernie's fraudulent scheme for a decade, "He warned the Securities and Exchange Commission many times," the producer says, "but they never gave it the scrutiny it deserved."

Dreyfuss was everyone's first choice to play Madoff, who rose from a workingclass Queens neighborhood to a Manhattan penthouse (cheekily, the actor's son Ben plays young Bernie). "We knew that Richard could get the tough side of Bernie but also bring humanity and give us more than a one-dimensional, cardboard version," Pichirallo explains.

"I kind of look like him, though he has a real honker of a nose." the Oscar winner admits on the Manhattan set that stands in for Madoff's headquarters, a legit trading business that was run by his sons, Mark (Tom Lipinski) and Andrew (Danny Deferrari), but also was used by Bernie as a cover for the scam that was going on two floors below. Dreyfuss's daughter is a makeup artist for the Navy SEALs and made a prosthetic schnoz for the star to use, but unfortunately. applying it daily "added 45 minutes to the day and took too much time to maintain." the actor reveals.

Emmy and Tony winner Blythe Danner stars as Bernie's almost equally reviled wife, Ruth, while Lewis Black, Michael Rispoli, Peter Scolari and the late David Margulies are among the familiar faces playing coconspirators, family and the scammed victims.

Dreyfuss gets mad as hell when he talks about the real-life Madoff, calling him "a self-deluded sociopath and a grotesque, outsize villain." He likens the man to one of Shakespeare's most cunning evildoers. "In Othello, lago turns to the audience and says, 'I could stop right now, but God, this is fun and I'll do this for as long as I can pull it off!' Bernie was having too much fun to stop. He made billions, which he spent on houses, cruises and Rolls-Royces. He was a really nice guy who just happened to sneak into your house at night to steal your furniture."

If the actor sees only darkness in his character, Danner-who also played a woman modeled after Ruth in The Commons of Pensacola, a 2013 off-Broadway play costarring Sarah Jessica Parker-

From top: Charles Grodin portrays Carl Shapiro, a Boston philanthropist and early Madoff investor; Dreyfuss and Danner; Erin Cummings plays Bernie's duped, loyal longtime secretary, Eleanor feels some sympathy for Ruth. "She trusted him: she was with him since she was 13 and he was very seductive. So much so that, when her sons gave her an ultimatum to stop seeing him, she chose him."

Having been introduced to Ruth by a mutual friend, Danner recalls, "I found her quite fragile and that she would never get over losing her sons [to suicide and cancer]. She wanted me to know that she was a good person and a good grandmother and didn't know what her husband was doing."

But did she or the Madoff heirs know? Dreyfuss doesn't think so ("I believe they didn't know s--t about what Dad was doing"), and the movie leans toward that position as well, although Pichirallo notes, "they all ignored many opportunities to ask questions."

That's just what the SEC did too. it turned out: Madoff was taken down not by regulators but by the 2008 financial crisis brought on by the crash and burn of unregulated banks.

The scam's terrible effect on so many people leads Drevfuss to hope that viewers come out of this "with a sense of absolute outrage, a commitment that this will never happen again, and that everyone who is accountable in the financial industry should be fired, go to jail and shamed publicly."

Despite his strong opinions, if it were up to the actor, he wouldn't be done with Bernie Madoff. HBO also has a movie about him coming up, directed by Barry Levinson (Rain Man) and starring Robert De Niro and Michelle Pfeiffer as the infamous couple, based on the bestselling book The Wizard of Lies, written by New York Times reporter Diana B. Henriques. When Dreyfuss ran into De Niro's producing partner, Jane Rosenthal, he recounts, "I said, 'If you're still shooting the HBO version, I want to play a part. I'd play a waiter or an FBI agent. It would be great fun.' She said, 'That's a great idea.' And I never heard from her again."

SUNDAY, FEB. 7 6/5c, CBS

BS comes full circle with Super Bowl 50. The Eye Network, which broadcast the first Super Bowl in 1967 (along with NBC), introduces the EyeVision 360 replay system to television's biggest audience of the year. Thanks to 36 cameras strung around Levi's Stadium in Santa Clara, California, "you can freeze the action and spin around from pretty much any angle and see the blocking, what the quarterback saw, what the receivers saw," says Sean McManus, CBS Sports chairman. "It's an excellent way to break down a specific play and see why it worked and why it didn't." Cameras on the goal line pylons, used to great effect in recent college football championship games, also make their Super Bowl debut—with an added enhancement. "We have audio on them," McManus explains, "so that should be pretty dramatic."

For the halftime show, Coldplay will be joined on stage by several guests, including Super Bowl musical veterans Beyoncé and Bruno Mars. Sounds golden. —Karen Rosen

TELENOVELA'S JENCARLOS CANELA

MONDAY, FEB. 1 8:30/7:30c, NBC

HE PLAYS Xavier "Xavi" Castillo, a narcissistic singer-actor with blinding white teeth who stars in a steamy TV serial opposite his exwife, Ana Sofia (Eva Longoria). "Xavi is a douche bag, but he just can't help it," Canela says. "When a photographer says, 'I'm so excited to shoot you!' Xavi says, 'I'm excited for you!' I mean, who does that?"

WHERE YOU'VE SEEN HIM Canela, a Miamiborn Cuban, is one of the Latin world's top recording artists and the only Telenovela cast member who has actually acted in telenovelas. Among his spicier credits: Pasión Prohibida (Forbidden Passion) and Mas Sabe el Diablo (The Devil Knows More).

WHY WE LOVE HIM He's a brilliantly hilarious heartthrob, and those are damn hard to find. "Casting Xavi was an impossibly tall order and Jen was everything we wanted him to be-Latin, gorgeous with blue eyes, a phenomenal singer—but he'd never done comedy," says Longoria, who also exec produces the series. "I sat down to watch his audition going, 'Please don't suck. Please don't suck.' And he didn't. He was the only guy to land every joke perfectly. No exaggeration: I had tears of joy." SOAP OPERA AMNESIA Canela was getting ready to launch a world concert tour when Telenovela came calling. "They said, 'How'd you like to be Eva Longoria's love interest and suddenly I'm like, 'What tour? What music career?'" he says with a laugh. "I happily gave up everything for the opportunity." Canela has since signed with Republic Records for an English-language album helmed by the white-hot Monsters and Strangerz, who write and produce for Chris Brown, Jason Derulo and Maroon 5. "My life is so incredible right now," Canela says. "I am desperately trying to hold on to this moment." -Michael Logan

CONNOR JESSUP

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3 10/9c, ABC

MANY ASPIRE TO great things, but few achieve them by the time they reach legal drinking age. Not so with American Crime's Connor Jessup. The Falling Skies vet—who currently plays Taylor Blaine, the quiet teen whose rape allegations against several high school basketball stars upend his sportsminded Indiana community—is also a working writer-director. Here are five more details about the accomplished 21-year-old Canadian. -Aubry D'Arminio

He (sort of) made his screen debut in a Quebecois KFC commercial. He wasn't meant to have dialogue. "I ate copious amounts of cold fries and chicken," Jessup recalls. "Then the director wanted me to say, "Salud, Papa!" to my "dad." I'm the most Anglosounding kid ever-and when we saw it on TV, they got some French kid to dub the line!"

At 13, he pitched his first TV epi-L sode. "I was looking for excuses to prove that I should be taken very seriously," he says. Jessup was starring in Discovery

Kids' The Saddle Club when he and cast members thought up a story good enough to shoot. "I don't even remember what it was about. It was just this crazy adventure for our characters to go on."

Jessup also writes, directs and pro-○ duces short films. His second project, the ethereal Boy, about the ghost of a kid who follows his grieving classmate back home, premiered at the Toronto International Film Festival last year. "I love dramas, but I also love ghost stories," he says.

Making American Crime scares him more than any Falling Skies monster.

"In Falling Skies, you were always part of a greater scene of 10 people running down the street talking about an explosion or standing around pointing at maps," he says. "A lot of American Crime is two or three people sitting in a room, with complicated dialogue. It's much more difficult."

Despite his many efforts, he's still unsure of himself. "All actors are morbidly insecure," he says. "No matter what!"

MEDICAL DRAMAS POSSESS three things: scrubs, blood and a staff that feels like a "family." Code Black's senior nurse (Luis Guzmán) even goes by Mama. The doctors are his "kids." But now wide-eyed, rookie resident Angus (Harry Ford) has real kin in the operating room: his snarky surgeon brother, Mike (Casual star Tommy Dewey). And the siblings will play a major role in tonight's eventful flashback episode. Ford chats about TV bros and other family matters. -AD

What's Angus's role in Code Black's brood? In many ways, he feels like the baby who just needs a little encouragement, lots of hugs and some diaper-rash cream.

Who's funnier, you or Tommy Dewey? Tommy. He's one of the sharpest wits around, but please don't tell Bonnie [Somerville]. Or Raza [Jaffrey]. They think they're a real barrel of laughs. What do you think makes you guys seem like you could be related? Aside from our Southern charm, almond-shaped eyes, strong jawlines and superhuman intellects, I'd say it's that we're both like golden retrievers after they've just had a great bath. How is Mike's presence affecting Angus? Mike immediately made the world less lonely for him. He's also Angus's fiercest advocate—but such adoration belies a complex love. What else holds Angus back? His desire to please everyone else before himself. He's got the heart and the mind to be the hospital's best doctor, but it's possible no one will ever know. That and his desire for doughnuts. Art imitating life!

Mercy Street 10/9c, PBS (check local listings at pbs.org) Even if the infection doesn't kill you on this Civil War–era hospital show, the doctors certainly might: Mary allows a detoxing Dr. Foster to guide Samuel through an intricate medical procedure.

THEY GOT SIX seasons and...guest spots on Dr. Ken! It's a Community reunion this week as Danny Pudi and Joel McHale visit former costar Ken Jeong's new sitcom. McHale faces off with the doc as Ken's nemesis, while Pudi plays Julie's (Kate Simses) jerky on-again, off-again boyfriend. Pudi fills us in on the big homecoming. —Gregory E. Miller

Ken's been talking about getting you guys on the show for months. When did he bring it up? He's been talking about it since, I think, Season 3 of Community. [Laughs] We're always discussing working together in a different way. But it was probably in the fall. I think that's a testament to Ken's loyalty that instead of worrying about his show, he's still worried about our old show.

Dr. Ken is based on Ken's former life as a doctor. What past job of yours could make for a good series? I used to say it would be about me being a door-to-door salesman of knives because at the end of high school, I worked for Cutco. But then I realized that's probably not a safe show.

Were you a good salesman? No. When people said no, I said, "I understand," and I left. In your years of knowing Ken, has he ever performed a medical procedure on you? There was one time we were bored on the Community set, and so everyone, spearheaded by Joel, dared me to drink this bowl of crazy liquids—like amino acids, soy sauce, hot sauces-for $50. I was like, "OK, I'll do it, [but] I need to consult with my doctor." So I asked Ken, and he was like, "You're going to experience a lot of indigestion and heartburn, but don't worry about it!" As soon as I drank the bowl, he gave me Tums, and it did help. But it was not a great idea in the middle of a shooting day. Joel still owes me $50, by the way.

FRIDAY, FEB. 5 8/7c, Fox

▶ leepy Hollow is taking on its biggest foe yet—a move to Friday nights. But executive producer Clifton Campbell believes the shift is actually a step in the right direction for the supernatural thriller, now in its third season. "That's the night of The X-Files and Fringe," he says. "That's the night where Fox feels a show like this can live and breathe, so I think that fans should read this as a gigantic sign of support."

And the series will waste no time getting down to its patented brand of freaky business when it returns tonight. Crane (Tom Mison), Jenny (Lyndie Greenwood) and Joe (Zach Appelman) are still reeling from losing Abbie (Nicole Beharie), who vanished after procuring a gem with dangerous powers. "Crane feels quite alone without Abbie—this is new territory for him," Campbell says. "Their bond is something he relies on a great deal."

Though Campbell promises that the show will eventually dive into the reasons behind Abbie's decision as well as where she went, right now, "she's literally just gone, and they don't know what that means at all," he teases.

Unfortunately, there's more to deal with than Abbie's whereabouts. Season 3's big bad, Pandora (Shannyn Sossamon), has reunited with her long-lost love, the Hidden One (Peter Mensah), and the devious duo is laying the groundwork for their evil master plan. "[Our team finds] themselves in over their heads," Campbell previews. "And they're trying to do everything they can to not only survive, but to put an end to them." —Marisa Roffman

WHAT'S WATCHING WORTH WORTH

FEB. 8-14

THE AMAZING RACE

FRIDAY, FEB. 12 Season premiere, 8/7c, CBS

he Amazing Race is getting social.
The CBS competition series kicks off its 28th season with 11 teams of two, all composed of social-media influencers who have accrued millions of followers across platforms like YouTube, Instagram and Vine.

"But take away the fact that millions of people watch them," host Phil Keoghan insists about these intrepid contestants. "They're just interesting people, period."

One high-profile duo: best friends and YouTube stars Korey Kuhl and Tyler Oakley. Oakley alone has more than 7.9 million subscribers on the video-streaming site. "Of all our racers, I thought he might be affected by being the most famous," Keoghan says. "But he is really what you see online: a curious, fun and lovable guy."

This season also features three new countries on the Race course: Colombia, Georgia and Armenia. "You don't see these places on TV very often," Keoghan says. "All shows can do casting twists to keep it fresh, but we have the ability to never go back to the same location, even after 28 seasons." —Rob Moynihan

MONDAY, FEB. 8 9/8c, CBS

SCORPION GENIUSES TOBY Curtis (Eddie Kaye Thomas) and Happy Quinn (Jadyn Wong) have finally cracked the code to each other's hearts. The behavioral psychologist and mechanical engineer have spent the last season and a half flirting and even sharing a few kisses, but tonight they finally take their romance to the next level. Thomas and Wong discuss the future of Quintis. —RM

What were your reactions when you learned Toby and Happy would get together?

Thomas: I don't think we were dragging it out. These two people weren't emotionally ready to be in a relationship, but they're growing up. Wong: I just wonder how the audience is going to react.

What have you heard from fans?

these people.

Wong: Eddie says that there's fan fiction. I didn't really know what that was! [Laughs]

Thomas: The fan fiction is amazing. It makes me want to step my game up if the fans are being that creative and thoughtful about Wong: And if it doesn't go their way, it's interesting how angry they can get.

Does the relationship change the characters at all?

Wong: Change is inevitable. Happy's getting out of her comfort zone. But throughout the danger and circumstances that we're put in, Toby has proven again and again to Happy that she can trust him and that he loves her.

Thomas: It's similar to sending Sylvester [Ari Stidham] to prison—let's put these characters in an uncomfortable place and see what happens. Toby has wanted this since he first saw Happy, but he has no idea how to maneuver the situation.

How will this affect the dynamics within the team when they find out?

Thomas: Sly is pretty excited about it. Walter [Elyes Gabel] is not so comfortable about two of his employees in a romantic relationship, and it also holds up a mirror to the Walter and Paige [Katharine McPhee] situation. It puts some pressure on them.

Will this relationship last?

Thomas: There are going to be lots of bumps in the road. These characters are so horrible in any type of relationship. I'm excited to see how the hell they're going to deal with a romantic one.

TUESDAY, FEB. 9 8/7c, The CW orry, Arrow, but The Flash found another show to have a crossover with: itself! With Season 2 hinging on Zoom's reign of terror against Earth 2 and its Flash, Jay Garrick (Teddy Sears), it's time for Barry (Grant Gustin) and Co. to kick off a two-part visit. "Barry decides to take the fight to Zoom on his home turf because luring him to our Earth didn't work out so well," executive producer Andrew Kreisberg says. "And in the grand tradition of great alternative-universe stories like Back to the Future Part II, Doctor Who and Fringe, there are doppelgängers galore. Some people who are no longer with us are alive over there, some people who are good here are bad there and vice versa."

Among the Earth 2 switcheroos are resident sweetheart Caitlin (Danielle Panabaker), who is revealed to be cold-blooded baddie

Killer Frost in the other world, and her late hubby, Ronnie Raymond (Robbie Amell), known there as Deathstorm. "They're this sort of metahuman Bonnie and Clyde of that world," Kreisberg explains. "We've been teasing Killer Frost for a long time, and getting to see Danielle revel in her bad side...the closest thing I can liken it to is vampire Willow from Buffy the Vampire Slayer."

Of course, it's not all about Earth 2. "There's also a crisis on Earth 1, so half the team is dealing with that," says Kreisberg, adding that the mash-up of these Earths, concluding in next week's episode, gives fans the best of both worlds. "There are scenes that are hilarious and scenes that are terrifying. It's everything at once," he says. "As I always say, we're proud of them all, but we're especially proud of this one." —Damian Holbrook

THOSE WHO CAN'T

THURSDAY, FEB. 11 Series premiere, 10:30/9:30c, TruTV

BAREFOOT CONTESSA IN PARIS PART DEUX

SUNDAY, FEB. 14 1/noon c, Food Network

WHO DOESN'T WANT to spend Valentine's Day in Paris with the Barefoot Contessa? Superchef and bestselling author Ina Garten takes us to the City of Light in her Food Network special Barefoot Contessa in Paris Part Deux, but she won't be reveling in French cuisine. This is a salute to the Americans in Paris—the ones who are cooking up a storm over there. —Michael Logan

The French can get rather testy. Are they going to be OK with an homage to American cooking? We in the U.S. have a very old-fashioned notion of the French. They used to be quite annoyed with us, like if we didn't speak French perfectly, but now I never encounter attitude. In fact, they're warm and welcoming and absolutely obsessed with food by American chefs. They call it "tres Brooklyn." My God, it's a huge craze over there! So are American cocktails.

Does American food actually taste better if you cook it in France? In the special, I make lobster rolls with [chef] Gregory Marchand and I'm thinking, Really? I live on Long Island. Why did I go all the way to Paris for this? But here's why: We use Brittany lobster and fantastic brioche. It is all about the ingredients. Same dish, vastly different results. This is your second Paris special, you had massive success with your cookbook Barefoot in Paris and you have a second home there. The romance never fades? Never! On our first trip decades ago, my husband [Yale dean emeritus Jeffrey Garten] and I had so little money we had to camp in sleeping bags on the outskirts of town. I was years away from the food business. [Laughs] In fact, all I could do was warm things up. But that trip focused me and changed my life. I owe it all to Paris!

She inspires with her message of love!

Inspired by popular Blue Willow china and the timeless tale of true love it so beautifully tells, "Magical Blessing of Two Lovers" is a first-of-its-kind figurine that reminds us that, with faith in our hearts, all things are possible.

Handcrafted and painted by hand.

Quietly perched for a moment of reflection, this angelic beauty is visited by a feathered friend — perhaps one of the cherished fable's star-crossed lovers! Every fine line is crafted by hand, and her wings and dress are delicately

Answers to puzzle of Jan. 18

SUDOKU

The goal of Sudoku is to fill in every empty box with one of nine letters. Each letter can appear only once in each horizontal row, as well as in every vertical column and in each of the 3x3 grids. Each finished puzzle will contain the spelling of a TV star, character, setting or show. Last issue's puzzle, about the creator of Law & Order, contained the letters C DFIKLOR and W. The finished grid spelled out Dick Wolf.

One of the superheroes of DC's Legends of Tomorrow appears in this issue's puzzle at left. It has the letters A G H I K L M R and W.

DAMIAN HOLBROOK | @damianholbrook

for losing nothing in translation. You don't need to speak Spanish or even "soap opera" to understand that Eva Longoria as a desperately needy diva dealing with hilarious costars, hurricanes and overheated TV rivals es muy fabuloso.

CHEERS TO THE 100

for being a perfect 10. Daring enough to off key characters, sly enough to use postapocalyptic tribes as a timely political allegory and touting a cast hot enough to be on The CW, the primo sci-fi drama launched Season 3 with Clarke (Eliza Taylor) on the run and us all-in for the ride.

CHEERS TO JOSH HOLLOWAY'S ALIEN-INVASION DRAMA COLONY

for keeping viewers happily lost. "So happy to see Josh again. I know [executive producer] Carlton Cuse will keep stringing us along slowly. Hope everyone will have patience while this plays out. Today, people are in such a hurry for instant gratification and answers." -Stacv Nordt Ladas

FOLLOW CHEERS & JEERS> TV Guide Magazine

JEERS TO SURVIVOR

for taking Big Brother's sloppy seconds. Jeff Probst and the Survivor team are better than having to recruit BB16's creepy Caleb Reynolds—he of the unsettling obsession with housemate Amber—to participate in Season 32. This is Survivor, not Bachelor in Paradise, people!

JEERS TO FOX'S JACK Bauer-less 24 reboot, Damn it, Chloe! Despite what Kiefer Sutherland and the powersthat-be say, the show's tickingclock concept is not the star at all. CTU's craziest agent is. No Bauer.

no thank you.

JEERS TO PRETTY LITTLE LIARS' ARIA

(Lucy Hale) for being a shady little player. After all the fibs. threats and fatal mistakes she and the girls have faced, teeny Miss Montgomery went and lied about seeing Ezra the night of Charlotte's murder. No wonder Ali thinks she's a killer!

JEERS TO REUNION NO-SHOWS.

First Matthew Perry announces he won't be there for a Friends meet-up during NBC's salute to director James Burrows, then Zac Efron bails on the other Wildcats at Disney's toast to High School Musical's 10th anniversary. Guess we're not all in this together.
